TO BONA FIDE INVESTORS.

THE DIRECTORS of a PUBLIC COMPANY, the Head Offices of which are situate in the City of Manchester, with Branches to be opened in two important towns in England, having completed their arrangements, beg respectfully to call the particular attention of the public to their investment.

The concern, previously and for over twenty years, has been the property of one private gentleman, during which time it has been in active operation, and has returned very flattering profits, which profits will be considerably augmented by the introduction of additional capital, the Vendor having come to an arrangement with the present Company for that purpose.

As this is an undertaking of a substantial character, and one which cannot fail to return first-class Dividends on investments, it is requested that adventurous speculators seeking promotion money, and others bagatelling in questionable concerns, will not make applications for particulars; but to all who desire to secure a permanent income, from the humble investor of five pounds to the more fortunate one of five thousand, the Directors will give the fullest information; and they respectfully solicit such persons to write for Prospectuses immediately, to

"The merest glance over the pages of the book will show what an advantage Mr. Simpson possessed over most travellers in being able to use pen and pencil with equal freedom and skill. The unimaginative reader, who would turn away from pages of laborious description, is caught by the clever pictures of people, scenery, and objects of curiosity; while all that is necessarily wanting in such artistic sketches is cleverly supplied by a running commentary, which gives evidence at once of special knowledge, of quick observation, and of considerable literary skill."—Daily News.

THE ACADEMY

A WEEKLY REVIEW of LITERATURE, SCIENCE, ART, MUSIC, AND THE STAGE.—Price 4d.

"The ACADEMY may fairly claim the first place among literary journals as the representative of the ripest and soundest English scholarship; and its criticisms of art, literature, music, and the drama are informing, incisive, and trustworthy."

"It is hardly possible in a few words to give an idea of the excellence of this old journal in its new form, but every subject with which it deals (and it deals with many untouched by other papers) is entrusted to the hands of men who know what they are writing about, and the result is a freshness and fullness of information and an accuracy of judgment which commands confidence, and ministers to the intellectual satisfaction and pleasure of the reader. . . . The accomplished and scholarly dramatic critic of the ACADEMY, Mr. Frederick Wedmore, the novelist, whose theatrical notices are perhaps the best in style and the most trustworthy now appearing in any London journal."—Manchester City News.

"Our contemporary the ACADEMY has suddenly sprung into a great literary position, and is full of instructive and interesting matter."—Spectator.

"The ACADEMY, in its new and enlarged form, has a promising look. Its size is that of the Athenaeum, and the general arrangement of its contents does not differ much from that of its venerable and not too enterprising contemporary. The great distinction between the two is that the articles of the ACADEMY are signed. . . . It will be seen that there is no lack of strong names. But strong names will not of themselves float a new paper. The editing, the general tone, the make-up of it are more important, and of these too a good report can be given. . . . Altogether, the ACADEMY is very readable, and bids fair to be a formidable rival to the Athenaeum, which, for that matter, it might speedily and easily surpass in certain respects."—New York Tribune.

"We can confidently recommend the ACADEMY to our readers. Its price is fourpence, and all its papers and reviews are signed by their writers, whose names have a high position in literature and art."—London Figaro.
